United Arab Emirates concern for OFWs

Food is more important than video games!

As I was out in Manila for most of the week, I was a bit surprised by the intense political and social issues that were being discussed. It seemed that everyone was talking about the same things, from the economy to the environment. I was reminded of the importance of food in our lives, especially in a country like the Philippines where food security is a major concern. We need to focus on ensuring that everyone has access to safe and nutritious food, rather than getting caught up in political debates.

FRANCE'S PRESIDENTIAL POLLS

Hollande, Sarkozy head for runoff

PARIS — President candidate Francois Hollande won a narrow victory in France's first round of Friday's presidential election, after the president of economic growth and a general decline in President Nicolas Sarkozy, who is expected to lose a runoff with Sarkozy on May 6.

The strong showing by the left and the rise in the political fortunes of the left led to a change in France after 17 years of Sarkozy. Hollande, 46, won 31.1 per cent of the vote, while Sarkozy, 56, won 28.6 per cent. Sarkozy's main opponent, Nicolas Sarkozy, won 17.9 per cent.

It may also represent the last message of a challenge to the Sarkozy-dominated majority of the Senate, which holds that the left and Sarkozy's coalition, the main right and left coalition, will provide a government. Hollande's victory was a surprise, as he was not expected to win.

The French vote "is a historic moment," said Sarkozy's campaign manager, Jean-Marie Le Pen, who is the leader of Sarkozy's party, the Front National.

But the French media did not expect a left-wing victory, which would mean a change in the French government.

France's president and the prime minister, Nicolas Sarkozy, 56, of the main opposition party, the Socialist Party, won 31.1 per cent of the vote, while Sarkozy, 56, won 28.6 per cent.

The election is a historic moment for France, as it marks the first time a left-wing candidate has won the presidency. Hollande's victory was a surprise, as he was not expected to win.

The same trend exists, in fact, with the singer's cap: new versions are made of synthetic materials. Byrne's music is made of technology, of gathering the most modern music and film photos.

COMMENTS ON STUDENT WORK

Comments on student work are an important part of the learning process. They provide students with feedback on their work and help them to improve their skills. Comments should be specific, constructive, and focused on the work itself, rather than the student's personality. They should also be timely and given in a supportive environment. Comments can be written or verbal, and can be given individually or in a group. The goal of comments is to help students understand their strengths and weaknesses and to provide them with the tools and resources they need to succeed.
